BEER HALL & WINE ROOM

In the next few pages there are 100 wines. It's a lot and it can be a little daunting. We don't want it to be off putting, but rather an opportunity for you to escape your day to day and maybe for a moment, feel like you're somewhere else.

Maybe you're taken back to a place you once holidayed, or a time when you had a ball with mates. Maybe you haven't been to the Rhone Valley, or Piedmont, or Tasmania.

Well, you can at least drink something from there.

PS, you should at least go visit Tassie, it's ace.

We don't have everything in the wine list, just as the food menu doesn't have coq au vin or flammekueche (Flammekueche is bloody unreal though)

We have a selection, a mere snapshot of the world of wine, ultimately we want you to be able to look through and choose something before you pass out from reading too much.

Or simply leave it to us. Ask us questions, try things you haven't had, or haven't heard of and explore the next few pages knowing that we are so excited to be offering these wines, and we really hope you love it too.

This page is about acid and softness, freshness and almost no oak. The first 8 wines are all crunch and zip. No wood, well, maybe some subtle staves in a couple, but essential all line and drive. Wines that go well with salt and fat and some spice. The European selection is comforting, the acid seems hidden, but it's there. In good wine, acid is always in the mix. So a page of contrast, a page of thrills and chills.

This page is about weight. There is oak, the Chardonnay section will have it, the top section will have it. You might see it a lot, you may not notice it at all. Whilst the butter elements of Chardonnay might be elusive, that generosity and ripeness can be found in the Marsannes and blends at the top of the page. Comforting, familiar and delicious.

BEER HALL & WINE ROOM

Such a complex list of tastes, textures and flavours here. It's hard to see a thread, but tannin would be a pretty consistent theme. That chewy, chalky texture you get from 60 and 70% cocoa chocolate. You know, the healthy chocolate. These wines are best with food, as the fat, salt, protein and cheesy elements take up the tannin and leave you with a wine feeling almost silky. Savoury and earthy, complex and intriguing, below are wines that will blow you away.

This page has, essentially, two different grapes. Shiraz and Pinot Noir. But beneath the name of the grape, lies the soil that creates huge differences. In the winery, the hands that sculpt an end product to their will. Shiraz from the Barossa compared to one from Beechworth has infinite variation in texture and expression. So too, a Pinot Noir from a Premier Cru site in Burgundy, tasted alongside one from Mornington Peninsula could make you doubt the very words on the label. Just two types of grapes, but wonderfully individual bottles of wine.

We could probably have 100 dessert wines on this page and not even scratch the surface of this incredible wine category. Alas, a chosen few, to represent a world of sweetness.

Two prices are listed, one for by the glass with serving size in (ml) and the other for the bottle.

All wines are 375ml unless they aren't.
